Private Lives (continued)

Jefferson Caffery, 51, U. S. Ambassador to Brazil, in Rio de Janeiro on Nov. 20, married Miss Gertrude McCarthy of Chicago. The bride's late father, Col. Daniel McCarthy, was chief quartermaster on General Pershing's staff during the War. The wedding was solemnized by the Archbishop of Rio de Janeiro in his palace. Groom Caffery, who served a brilliant term as Ambassador in Cuba, has been a career diplomat since 1911. At his right is Monsignor Aloysio Masella, Papal Nuncio.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, 39-year-old British Secretary of State for War, told army cooking champions at Aldershot that he had never married because he had never found a wife who came up to his cooking standards. Bachelor Hore-Belisha prefers cheese and tomato salad for lunch, likes food best when with people who enjoy discussing as well as swallowing it.

Mrs. Terry Cohen, 23-year-old London housewife, dresses like a child, likes to play with dolls, attended school for four months as an eleven-year-old girl. Playing hooky when she was promoted to a higher class, she was visited by the School Attendance Officer who was amazed to meet her husband. Only grown-up habit she enjoys is smoking cigarets.
