

ODE IN MEMORY OF THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS FALLEN FOR FRANCE

(To have been read before the statue of Lafayette and Washington in Paris, on Decoration Day, May 30, 1916.)

I

Ay, it is fitting on this holiday,
Commemorative of our soldier dead,
When—with sweet flowers of our New England May Hiding the lichened stones by fifty years made gray—
Their graves in every town are garlanded,
That pious tribute should be given too
To our intrepid few

Obscurely fallen here beyond the seas.
Those to preserve their country's greatness died;
But by the death of these
Something that we can look upon with pride
Has been achieved, nor wholly unreplied
Can sneerers triumph in the charge they make
That from a war where Freedom was at stake
America withheld and, daunted, stood aside.

II

Be they remembered here with each reviving spring,
Not only that in May, when life is loveliest,
Around Neuville-Saint-Vaast and the disputed crest
Of Vimy, they, superb, unfaltering,
In that fine onslaught that no fire could halt,
Parted impetuous to their first assault;
But that they brought fresh hearts and springlike too
To that high mission, and 'tis meet to strew
With twigs of lilac and spring's earliest rose
The cenotaph of those
Who in the cause that history most endears
Fell in the sunny morn and flower of their young years.

III

Yet sought they neither recompense nor praise,
Nor to be mentioned in another breath
Than their blue coated comrades whose great days
It was their pride to share—ay, share even to the death!
Nay, rather, France, to you they rendered thanks
(Seeing they came for honor, not for gain),
Who, opening to them your glorious ranks,
Gave them that grand occasion to excel,
That chance to live the life most free from stain
And that rare privilege of dying well.

O friends! I know not since that war began
 From which no people nobly stands aloof
 If in all moments we have given proof
 Of virtues that were thought American.
 I know not if in all things done and said
 All has been well and good,
 Or if each one of us can hold his head
 As proudly as he should,
 Or, from the pattern of those mighty dead
 Whose shades our country venerates to-day,
 If we've not somewhat fallen and somewhat gone astray.
 But you to whom our land's good name is dear,
 If there be any here
 Who wonder if her manhood be decreased,
 Relaxed its sinews and its blood less red
 Than that at Shiloh and Antietam shed,
 Be proud of these, have joy in this at least,
 And cry: "Now heaven be praised
 That in that hour that most imperilled her,
 Menaced her liberty who foremost raised

Europe's bright flag of freedom, some there were
 Who, not unmindful of the antique debt,
 Came back the generous path of Lafayette;
 And when of a most formidable foe
 She checked each onset, arduous to stem—
 Foiled and frustrated them—
 On those red fields where blow with furious blow
 Was countered, whether the gigantic fray
 Rolled by the Meuse or at the Bois Sabot,
 Accents of ours were in the fierce mêlée;
 And on those furthest rims of hallowed ground
 Where the forlorn, the gallant charge expires,
 When the slain bugler has long ceased to sound,
 And on the tangled wires
 The last wild rally stagers, crumbles, stops,
 Withered beneath the shrapnel's iron showers:—
 Now heaven be thanked, we gave a few brave drops;
 Now heaven be thanked, a few brave drops were ours."

There, holding still, in frozen steadfastness,
Their bayonets toward the beckoning frontiers,
They lie—our comrades—lie among their peers,
Clad in the glory of fallen warriors,
Grim clusters under thorny trellises,
Dry, furthest foam upon disastrous shores,
Leaves that made last year beautiful, still strewn
Even as they fell, unchanged, beneath the changing moon;
And earth in her divine indifference
Rolls on, and many paltry things and mean
Prate to be heard and caper to be seen.
But they are silent, calm; their eloquence
Is that incomparable attitude;
No human presences their witness are,
But summer clouds and sunset crimson-hued,
And showers and night winds and the northern star.
Nay, even our salutations seem profane,
Opposed to their Elysian quietude;
Our salutations calling from afar,
From our ignobler plane
And undistinction of our lesser parts:
Hail, brothers, and farewell; you are twice blest, brave hearts.
Double your glory is who perished thus,
For you have died for France and vindicated us.

THE END
