

Type: Person / community

What: Minnesota Institute for Sustainable Agriculture
Its purpose is "to bring together the diverse interests of the agricultural community with interests from across the University community in a cooperative effort to develop and promote sustainable

Keywords: Food system / Agricultural practices > Sustainability, Agricultural practices > Farming methods

When/Where: 1991 - present
Housed within Dept of Agronomy and Plant Genetics at the U of M. Based in Borlaug Hall, St. Paul campus. Concerned with the whole state and beyond.

Who:

Why: MISA works to encourage "healthy debate" among various perspectives on sustainability in order to arrive at solutions, and engages in original research related to sustainability solutions.

How: Works to represent many perspectives among their member organizations, staff, and board members.