Who: For the Bush Foundation, prepared by the Headwaters Group
 Bush Foundation, organizations/groups/individuals supporting ecological health initiatives

Why: To evaluate the effectiveness of the Bush Foundation's "planting many seeds approach" to their grant awards and pinpoint where to focus future efforts.

How: "Assesses and prioritizes grantmaking opportunities... examines ways each area [creating a sustainable regional food system, promoting innovations in alternative energy, protecting youth from toxin exposure] advances solutions... critiques the nonprofit capacity to undertake the work... recommends on priority area... [and] identifies a preliminary theory of change."
