Several standing committees currently undertaking other projects which will facilitate the use of this survey among Rocky Mountain area Slavic scholars. Because of a setback in Federal funds, a working committee in several of the national scholarly organizations, and projected declines in university and college enrollments in the coming years, those of us in Slavic Studies will have to work together more efficiently at the regional level. RMASS stands ready to aid and encourage the interaction of Slavic scholars in the mountains-Plains area. This survey is only a first step. Once we can identify the strengths and weaknesses in the offerings and resources of our area, we can build the basis for a truly regional cooperation for all.

PREFACE

Since its inception three years ago, the Rocky Mountain Association for Slavic Studies has actively sought to be of use to the membership in ways other than just holding a yearly conference. This survey of Russian and Slavic courses, compiled by Professor Deborah Hardy of the University of Wyoming, is one proof of our ability to serve Slavic Studies in our region.

Several standing committees of RMASS are currently undertaking other projects which will facilitate a closer cooperation among Rocky Mountain area Slavic scholars. Because of a cutback in federal funds, a seeming paralysis in several of the national scholarly organizations, and projected declines in university and college enrollments in the coming years, those of us in Slavic Studies will have to work together more efficiently at the regional level. RMASS stands ready to aid and encourage the interaction of Slavic scholars in the Mountains-Plains area. This survey is only a first step. Once we can identify the strengths and weaknesses in the offerings and resources of our area, we can build the basis for a truly beneficial cooperation for all.

On behalf of RMASS I would like to express our deepest thanks to Professor Hardy. Professors Sidney Heitman and James Long of Colorado State University and Professor Bernard Oppel of the U. S. Air Force Academy also made major contributions to this study.

INTRODUCTION

This listing of course offerings in Russian and Slavic studies in colleges of the Rocky Mountain and other contiguous areas was inaugurated upon resolution of the founding meeting of the Rocky Mountain Association for Slavic Studies in 1970, at which the participants urged a survey of Slavic area resources in this part of the country. Information from questionnaires proving insufficient, the survey was actually compiled on the basis of printed catalogs from the various universities involved.

It should be noted that such catalogs often become outdated within the year of their issue, as courses are cancelled or inaugurated and that material herein, collected in 1971-72, should not be presumed entirely accurate for the current and following academic years. Persons desiring more up-to-date information are urged to consult the departments concerned.

The Rocky Mountain Association for Slavic Studies and I owe great thanks to those work-study students at the University of Wyoming who devoted many hours to compiling the information herein.
