SELECTED MESSAGES FROM THE LAPD
MOBILE DIGITAL TERMINAL SYSTEM

November 1, 1989 - March 4, 1991

INDEPENDENT COMMISSION
ON THE LOS ANGELES POLICE DEPARTMENT

SELECTED MESSAGES FROM THE LAPD

MOBILE DIGITAL TERMINAL SYSTEM

November 1, 1989 - March 4, 1991

The MDT System

The mobile digital terminal (MDT) system is a computerized communications network installed since 1983 in approximately 1,100 LAPD vehicles.

The MDT system permits LAPD patrol cars to communicate directly with radio telephone operators at computer terminals located at the Parker Center headquarters of LAPD. Patrol units use the MDT to communicate with headquarters regarding responses to service calls, unit status checks and background information on service calls, referred to as incident histories.

Using the MDT, an officer can also directly access the various computer data files available to the Department for routine information, such as want/warrant inquiries, vehicle inquiries and checks, and property checks. The MDT keypad is equipped with standardized command keys for much of this information, which substantially reduces the amount of keypad input by the officers.

The MDT system also permits officers in one vehicle to communicate with other vehicles in the equivalent of one-to-one "conversations." In the "send" mode, the officer types a message on the MDT keypad, identifying the police unit to which it is directed. Typically, each MDT unit has a unique equipment number and each police vehicle is assigned a unique unit number for each watch. The message is then automatically relayed through the central computer to the designated receiving unit. These messages are referred to as "TO" messages.

Commission Review of MDT Messages

Computer records of all MDT messages by LAPD units have been retained by the Department since the first use of the system in 1983. A team of Commission staff, headed by Deputy General Counsel Barbara Kelley and supported by the accounting firm of KPMG Peat Marwick, reviewed computer printouts of MDT "TO" messages for all 18 divisions in the Department for a total of 182 days between November 1, 1989 and March 4, 1991. This material amounted to approximately 65 boxes, each containing between 1300 and 1500 pages of printouts. The printouts identified the date, time and sending and receiving unit for each message.

The review of the MDT transcripts focused on the following categories of comments: racial/ethnic; gender bias; gay and lesbian; use of force/beatings; pursuits; and shootings. The staff review identified over 1450 entries of "TO" messages within these categories as significant to the Commission's areas of inquiry, of which approximately 700 entries have been selected for this compilation.

Each numbered entry in the attached compilation is either a single message or an exchange of messages between two units. The date and time of transmission is provided for each message. In some instances, the meaning of a comment becomes clearer through a series of messages. In these cases we have included some or all of the "dialogue" between the police units to put the comment in context.
